Our fees are not contingent, and payment is due upon receipt of the statement. If the firm (Principle) has not received any comment about the statement within 30-days of its receipt, it is assumed to be found acceptable. As a means of encouraging timely payment of our statements, we reserve the right to add a finance charge of 1.5% (18% APR) per amount past due. If any statements remain unpaid for more than 90-days, we may, subject to our ethical and professional obligations, cease to perform services until satisfactory arrangements have been made for the payment of the unpaid statements, and future fees. In fairness to our many clients who promptly pay their statements each month, we reserve the right to take appropriate actions with respect to such delinquent accounts. Professional documents provided shall be considered null and void, contact with regulating authorities and/or approving bodies will be made to make them aware of the incomplete compensation. Applicable professional files will be considered no longer valid (e.g., drawings, specifications, determinations, letters, etc).
